Free your form.

Introducing the modern nature of seating. From architect Jean Nouvel and the Coalesse Design Group, elemental forms reminiscent of pebbles can be combined freely to take any shape in a space — furniture that flows naturally.

Where bold meets delicate.

Modern curves. Maximum comfort. Built with subtle contours that expertly support arms and backs, boldly rounded forms flow like a wave across the seams and swells of each seat to suspend the body softly.

Shapes seem irregular but they're far from formless. Structured seats require extra artistry and skill to upholster around edgeless corners.

Where form meets space.

Echoing the spontaneity of natural formations in landscapes, water and sky, any grouping of furniture can be assembled to create organic clusters and currents — and never be the same twice.

Ateliers Jean Nouvel reimagines the classic French tête-à-tête loveseat in a sculptural update that intuitively brings people together.

Where Jean Nouvel meets Coalesse.

“The key word in my work is elementary. I look for peculiarities and characteristics that are tied to simple functions, to the technologies and attitudes of the moment.

The elementary quality I seek has nothing to do with minimalism or brutalism: it involves ambiguity and complexity. The simpler an object looks, the more obvious or familiar, the harder it is to make, the more emotion it offers, and the better it stands the test of time.”

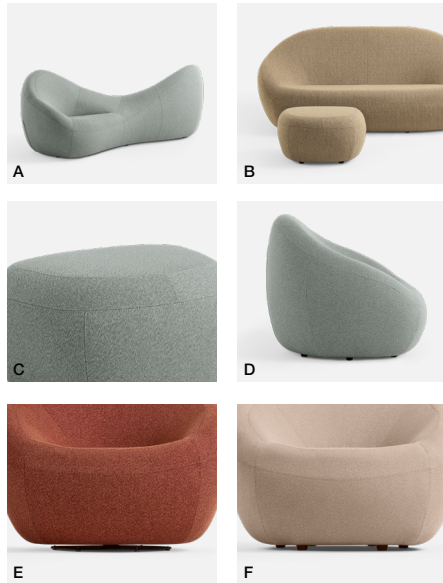

— Pritzker Prize-winning architect Jean Nouvel creates buildings and furnishings that are intimately in harmony with their surroundings — modern expressions of nature and culture.
